St. Louis Socially Responsible Business Seminar & Competition

September & October 2009

Young entrepreneurs have the power to target social problems through innovative and responsible business operations. Beyond charitable donations, social entrepreneurship is the hybrid between business and social values.

At the seminar, learn about and see examples of responsible entrepreneurs and explore ways to make your business more socially responsible. The competition is open to entrepreneurs under 40 with a plan for a new business or a new initiative in an existing business, for profit or nonprofit. Entries must contribute to advancing St. Louis development goals and show compliance with the UN Global Compact 10 Principles of Corporate Social Responsibility. The winner will receive a cash grant and other support for the implementation of their plan.
